“Boo Bradley is as warm and fun as blues acts come these days.” A.V. - The Onion

Boo Bradley is good time two-man Hokum junk and jive orchestra who are as fun to watch as they are to listen to. Meeting up in 2007, Boo Mullarky and Bradley Selz took to Madison, Wisconsin's illustrious State Street with the full intention of bringing the rollicking sounds and antics of the early 20th century jug bands back to life. They quickly became known as the go-to act for fun in the sun at Madison's legendary farmers' market. Soon they were being asked to perform at festivals and shows around the state, sharing the stage with well-known roots performers such as the Carolina Chocolate Drops and Frank Fairfield. This refreshing “little jug band that could” features a delightfully rich and clunky sonic palette that is sure to cure what ails you!

★ Boo is a one-human music machine all unto himself: steadily stomping an old parade drum with with one foot, snapping a tambourine with the other, giving a gratuitous car horn blast here and there, providing sassy brass section solos on kazoo..all while singing and fingerpicking along on a steel-bodied resonator guitar!

★ Bradley is the duo's award-winning rhythmsmith. He lets his digits dance away on a washboard bedecked with a curious assortment of kitchenware, bike bells and splash cymbal – a veritable xylophone of junk!

Boo Bradley recently finished work on their 3rd album together - Rub Rub Rub. Opting to capture the vibrancy of their street-hewn sound (without all the bus rumble!), they set up all their busking gear and some nice mics in the living room. Then proceeded to run through their favorite tunes from their set and produced 12 live recorded tracks for the album. In keeping with their hand-made approach to their artistry, they hand print every album using block-cut stamps designed and carved by Boo himself. Check out the YouTube video on the process they use to hand produce the Rub Rub Rub album: youtube.com/watch?v=JlQmaOcomzg
